Q: Declaratively add AWS-FFS objects to S3 Using AWS-FFS (Feature-Flexible File System) I can manage and schedule file copies across multiple S3 buckets. I would like to make my C# application more robust by providing a declarative interface to allow the user to config an object lifecycle policy that applies to S3 buckets and the files or folders the object contains. Example of the declarative file lifecycle policy in Python: bucket_lifecycle_policy = { "Version": "2012-10-17", "Statement": [{ "Effect": "Allow", "Action": ["s3:GetObject", "s3:ListBucket"], "Resource": ["arn:aws:s3:::bucket1", "arn:aws:s3:::bucket2"] }] } Is it possible to define such a policy in C# using AWS-FFS, AWS-CSharp or similar library? A: While you cannot put a statement with this kind of structure in the S3 policy in the same way you do in Python, you can construct a JSON object that conforms to the AWS S3 policy language and put it in the AccountLifecycle element of the AccountLifecyclePolicy. You will need to write code in C# to construct an object like this. Here is a simple example from the AWS SDK docs: var policy = new AccountLifecyclePolicy { BucketLifecycleExpirationInDays = 10 ,BucketLifecycleExpirationInStandardDays = 3

Caterham Motorsport director, Cyril Abiteboul, has today confirmed that the team will participate in the 2011 Formula 1 season. "We are delighted to confirm that we will be entering Formula 1," said Abiteboul. "Having examined the technical and business case, we have concluded that this is the best option for us at this stage of our operation. We will continue to manage all the activities we have in place in Formula 1 as we would in any other series, however our focus is firmly on the car development programmes we are working on and it is from that point of view that the decision was made." "In coming to this decision it is important to make clear what it is we are not going to do. We are not embarking on a future strategy where we join the sport at any point in the future. We are not signing any contracts, in fact we are not signing anything at this stage. We are simply saying that we will be a constructor in 2011, a fact we have now confirmed." "The way we did this is down to our determination to continue to add to our technical capability and keep developing the foundations for a successful future. We are already developing our plans for next year's car and some of the work we are doing is aimed directly at providing the team with the best possible platform for 2011. This decision will allow us to focus all our effort and energy on delivering our new car for next year." "To fans it must sound like we have somehow bifurcated our operations. This is not the case. We have not changed our track record at all. All of our current Formula 1 activity, from the design of our new car to the managing of all our commercial and technical elements, will continue as it has over the last eight years. Our aim is to evolve the way we look at Formula 1 in terms of our product, the business plan we follow and the way we manage the whole thing - and this is no different to what we have been doing for the last eight years." "We are proud to announce this decision because it was made in line with our values and our plan for long-term growth. We are determined to use this period of time to prepare ourselves for the challenging year we know we face. For us this was not a call we made lightly and it is not a call you can make lightly, which is why we have spent the last few weeks preparing the presentation we will be making to potential shareholders.
