In spite of her efforts, the edible mushroom extract in the little capsules eventually did exhaust the effect of the drug, at which point she knew nothing about what I was learning at the time, so she lost her chance of at last scoping out the ins and outs of the truth about "the miraculous drug" - perhaps realizing this, her willing, bumbling assistant, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, Sr. came up with his team of isoperimetric gambits. Q: clang-format: Show linenumbers in comment I'm using clang-format and it's great but I need a small tip. It's simple, because I already know how to do it, but I can't find the answer: How do I get clang-format to show the linenumber in the comment if I write /*!01 */?

A: I just tested this and it works with clang-format --cpp-include .h. If you want to reformat the source file as well then you'd need to add this to the global options: -isystem options/clang-format/llvm For example, with clang-format -isystem /usr/include/llvm-3.8/clang-format clang-format my-file.cc. The llvm-3.8 is optional if you want to include the LLVM version in the options. You can also include clang-format/ if you have clang-format installed in your system.

A: I have used command clang-format -style="{BasedOnStyle: 'LLVM'}" -show-number-line {srcFile.h} If you have clang-format 4.2.1 clang-format --show-number-line {srcFile.h} if you have clang-format 3.2.1 clang-format -style="{BasedOnStyle: 'LLVM'}" -show-number-line {srcFile.h} For more clang-format options use clang-format --help.
